

A poem about a Leopard

Panthera Pardus Orientalis won't run
Like a fly fleeing from a spider,
Sneakily stalking his prey
As silent as a creeping mouse,
King of the mountains
Like a bee ruling a hive
Black and grey is he but
Inside he is colourful with hopes of the future.

By Felicity Eastwood

Chameleon class